The McKinley Bill Passed by the Senate and Goes to the Conference Committee.

QUITE A SENSATIONAL REPORT

From New York About an Anticipated Panie if the Bill Goes Into Effect at Once.

But the Wise Financial Policy of the Adm'nistration Will Avert all Trouble-Speaker Reed the Lion of the Day at Washington-Other Capital News.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 10 .- There was considerable gossip provoked at the

New York stating the bankers are uniting in a protest against the tariff bill going into effect October 1. The dispatch states there is great excitement there and that a panic is imminent. There does however, that the House will extend the time, as the anxiety of the Republicans of the Ways and Means Committee is to msk the new duties applicable to the trad s, an i to prevent importers from anticipating the increased duties by making immense importations before the law goes into effect. The importations during June and July have exceeded those of corresponding months in any past year, importers laying out immense sums of money in goods. In anticipation of the increase of duties as anticipation of the increase of duties as arresult of so much money being sent abroad in this manner, the money market has been rather tight. A very large amount of imports of all sorts are now in hond in the Government warehouses. taken out before the first of October or they will be subject to the increased duties provided in the McKinley bill. thorities commend the Secretary's policy and say that the anticipation of interest on the 4 per cent bonds and the pur-chase of 4½ per cents with interest to date of maturity will meet the demands of business and prevent a positive stringency in the market. Twenty-four million dollars, the interest on the 4 per cent bonds for the past quarter and anticipated payment of interest for the rest of the year, is released by the department to-day. Forty million of 41 per cents have already been called, making in all $56,000,000 that have been released eince the 21st of August. By carrying out this wise policy Secretary Windom has given all the relief to the business interests that there is any probability will be needed.

insted about five initutes. O'Farrell demanded recognition from the Speaker pro tem and ordered that the journal had been changed since it left the House, but the changes were not as numerous nor as radical as might be supposed. The Senate had changed back a good many of the things changed by the Finance Committee. Major McKinley said further that he did not know to what extent the Democratic membera desired to debate. If the matter could come te a vote without extended debate he did not see why Congress would not be able to adjourn in about ten days.

come out of the entering on that policy. There was some great constitutional difficulties in the way, which had been ably stated by Mr. Exarts. He thought, also, that on the one side the reciprocal exchanges were incomplete and that they contained one or two articles—especially tea and hides—that had to be dealt with solely in the view of internal taxed or untaxed. He thought also that in the forefront of any policy on that question the United States should determine to put an end as far as legislation could do it, to the practice of foreign nations imposing export duties on products used here. He would have such products, coming from such nations, excluded altogether from American ports if they could be supplied from elsewhere. He, however, regarded the amendment rather as a declaration of purpose than as a definition of legislative policy; and it was in that view that he had given it his support.

The cavalcade, balloon ascension and fine races billed for to-day will doubtless, with fair weather, draw a still larger crowd than yeaterday's, and it is expected that if last evening's rain lets up in time to prevent a dampening effect on the people, the attendance will break all past records.

Mr. Medhurst did not hesitate to say, when detected, that he expected to smuggle in the jewels, which he had concealed in a small handbag and intusted to a steward's care. He said he had come into a fortune through the thoughtfalness of an uncle, recently departed, and he had come to this country to see the sights and also to furnish sights for the savages. For the latter purpose he had brought horses, dogs, carriages, catte, grooms and a lackey.

He nonchalently said that when the confiscated jewels were put up at auction he would outbid everybody else to regain possession of them. He did not speak without reckoning. He will probably get the "gems" for about $7$. In the meantime Mr. Medhurst, although a newcomer, has the laugh on the Custom House.

Miss LaRue, who had been superintending the filling of the bag, ran into a neat little tent put up near-by for her accommodation, and soon re-appeared divested of her street clothing and attired in neat dark tights and a bright lacket. Her husband, who accompanies her, embraced and kissed her tenderly, which for the first time impressed some of the spectators with the idea that her experiment was rather dangerous.

The young lady sat in the ring suspended from the parachute, and the guy roves were let go, while the large crowd that had gathered just about the place fell back and watched the big balloon Vender, b. k
